Die Medien im Wahlkampf

Bewährungsprobe für die Vermittler in der Demokratie

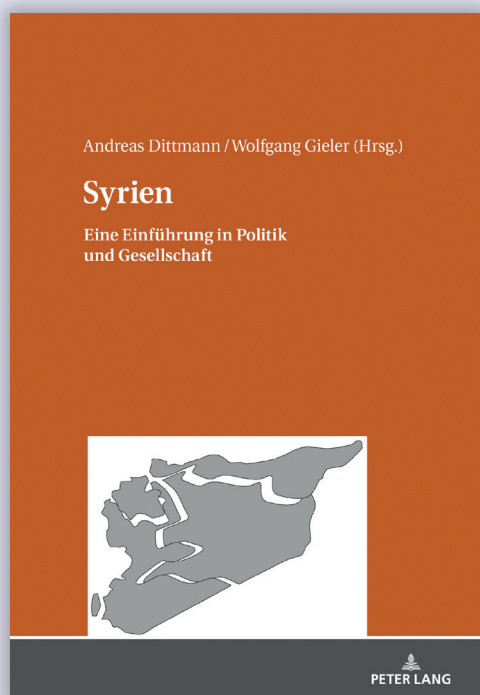

Wahlen sind ein Brennglas für die kritische Aufgabe der Medien als Vermittler in der Demokratie. Wahlkämpfe sind eine Serie von Medienereignissen. Medien vermitteln, um was und wen es geht. Also wollen Wahlkampfmanager sie lenken und verführen, bedrängen und beeinflussen. Unabhängiger Journalismus dagegen will sich nicht von Wahlkämpfern managen lassen. Redaktionen gehen mit eigenen Strategien ins Wahljahr – erst recht in Zeiten von «Fake news» und Populisten, die vom Feindbild Medien leben. Der Band enthält Beiträge der Journalisten Cordula Tutt, Jörg Quoos, Andreas Schneider und Matthew Karnitschnig, der Wahlkampfmanager Robert Heinrich und Mario Voigt sowie der Politikwissenschaftler Oskar Niedermayer und Marco Althaus.

Alim Baluch

The Disintegration of Bosnia and Herzegovina

From Ethnic Cleansing to Ethnified Governance

This book argues that the «international community» created and managed the dysfunctional state of Bosnia and Herzegovina by effectively rewarding ethnic cleansing, drawing up a transitional constitution which, in turn, generated a complex ethnifying polity incapable of independent reform. This constitution, which was only added as an annex to the Dayton Peace Agreement, has continued to encourage ethnification, understood in this book as the reproduction of imagined communities of descent. While accepting that foreign interference was necessary to end the war in the late 1990s, the book offers a critical review of the actions of the Office of the High Representative of the International Community (OHR) and other foreign actors since that period. It includes meticulous examination of hundreds of OHR decisions, as well as secret diplomatic cables published by Wikileaks revealing how the US embassy intervened in the country's trade and foreign policy. Drawing on a process-sociological perspective, the book interrogates the notion of ethnicity and offers a radical new perspective on post-war state-building in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

L'Europe en quête d'Européens

Pour un nouveau rapport entre Bruxelles et les nations

Plaidoyer en faveur de l'Union européenne, ce livre critique néanmoins certains choix culturels qu'elle a faits lors de sa fondation et qui entravent aujourd'hui son intégration. Elle doit rebâtir ses fondements symboliques et redéfinir sa relation avec les nations (à ne pas confondre avec les États). Les orientations culturelles qu'elle a privilégiées à sa naissance lui ont permis de connaître un essor rapide, mais faute de les réviser à temps, elles sont devenues dysfonctionnelles. Or, les tentatives qu'elle a faites ultérieurement pour se donner de nouveaux mythes et une identité continentale ont échoué. Par ailleurs, les leaders de l'Union se sont toujours méfiés des nations et des nationalismes, accusés d'avoir provoqué les horreurs des deux guerres mondiales. Ils ont donc voulu les contourner en instituant une gouvernance par le haut d'où a résulté un déficit démocratique. L'Union devra désormais s'employer à se réconcilier avec les nations, en les réhabilitant, et à tirer profit de leurs ressources symboliques pour se doter de mythes ayant une résonance à la fois nationale et européenne.

Von wegen: Lügenpresse

Analysen und Ansichten zur Renaissance eines Kampfbegriffs

Der Band vereint Beiträge der vom Förderbereich Politik und Kommunikation des Otto-Suhr-Instituts organisierten Ringvorlesung «Von wegen: Lügenpresse. Analysen und Ansichten zur Renaissance eines Kampfbegriffs». Im Kontext der so genannten Flüchtlingskrise sowie der um sich greifenden Demonstrationen gegen eine befürchtete Islamisierung des Abendlandes nahmen die Diffamierungen von JournalistInnen und Medien zu und subsumierten sich plakativ unter dem Schlagwort «Lügenpresse». Dabei ist dieser Begriff nicht neu. ExpertInnen aus Wissenschaft und Praxis erläuterten, warum es gerade jetzt zur massenhaften Misstrauenserklärung gegen die Medien kommt, wie Politik und Medien mit Rechtspopulisten umgehen sollten und welche Entwicklungen im Ausland zu beobachten sind.

Russland und Europa

Facetten einer Beziehung

Dieser Band vereint Beiträge zu einer interdisziplinären Ringvorlesung des Zentrums für Osteuropa-Studien der Universität Kiel, die verschiedene Facetten der europäisch-russischen Beziehungen beleuchtet, teilweise auch mit kontrastierenden Wertungen. Russland ist einerseits Teil Europas, andererseits Weltmacht mit globalen Interessen. Die Beziehungen zwischen (West-)Europa und Russland berühren viele Ebenen des politischen und gesellschaftlichen Lebens und oszillierten in der Geschichte zwischen Zusammenarbeit und kriegerischen Auseinandersetzungen. Gerade auf den letzten Jahren der Spannungen sowie auf dem gemeinsamen Wunsch, die Beziehungen wieder ins Positive zu wenden, liegt ein besonderer Akzent der versammelten Beiträge.

The European Union's Energy Security and Turkey's Role in the Southern Gas Corridor

Interdependence on the Natural Gas Pipeline between Turkey and EU

This study analyses the issue of energy security and natural gas in the Southern Gas Corridor, and its effects on the relationship between the European Union (EU) and Turkey. The increasing consumption of natural gas in the world as an energy source has rendered it a greater strategic importance in the world. Additionally, the conflict between Ukraine, Belarus and Russia over natural gas has threatened both the short and long-term security of the EU's gas supply. Consequently this conflict has created the necessity to find alternative routes in order to meet Europe's increasing gas demand. In this context, Turkey's and the EU's dependency on Russian natural gas has increased in the last decades, causing both Turkey and the EU to search for outside energy sources. Turkey plays a key role as part of the strategic Southern Gas Corridor initiative, which is a proposed gas pipeline in corporation with the Trans Anatolia Natural Gas Pipeline (TANAP) project, proposed to run from the Caspian region through Turkey to Europe. This study argues that the energy dependency among the countries not only affects the economic decisions, but also the political decisions.

The Rise and Fall of Europeanization

What is Next for Turkey-EU Relations?

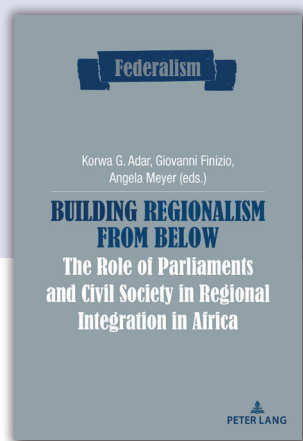

The 2000s started with massive support for Europeanization but now, in 2017, whether the negotiations should be suspended is debated. What happened? How did we come to this point? And maybe more importantly, what is next for Turkey-EU relations? Those are some of the questions that this book tries to dwell upon. In its effort to answer these questions, it starts with a reminder of the golden years of Europeanization. The second part is on Populism and how populist rhetoric frames not only the politics, but also the public opinion on Turkey-EU relations. Finally, Differentiated Integration (DI) models, as alternative cooperation mechanisms, are analyzed. It is argued that DI models hold the risk of turning Turkey-EU relations into more interest-based pragmatic ones and overshadow democratic norms and values.

Azerbaijan at the Crossroads of Eurasia

The Tumultuous Fate of a Nation Caught Up Between the Rivalries of the World's Major Powers

Modern Azerbaijan came into being in 1991 following a national struggle for the re-establishment of its independence, initiated long before the collapse of the Soviet Union. It is situated in a unique geographic location, at the crossroads of Eurasia and on the famous Silk Road that links Europe and Asia. It has been the stage of particularly rich historical events, testament to its ancient State traditions, the wealth of its cities, the violence of the imperial invasions. Today this secular country, facing war with Armenia, is central to the geopolitical stakes in the region, whether in terms of the international strategies of major powers or the geo-economic considerations of oil and gas exports to Europe. It has put in place a multi-faceted foreign policy and initiated political and economic reforms as it moves towards a better future.

La « zone grise » du travail

Dynamiques d'emploi et négociation
au Sud et au Nord

Le présent ouvrage porte sur la dynamique des zones grises du travail. Cette notion illustre le changement de paradigme qui s'exprime dans le renouvellement de la place de l'État à un moment où l'on assiste dans de nombreux pays à sa privation de domaines relevant jusqu'alors de sa compétence. La notion de zone grise explicite l'incertitude et l'indétermination, propres aux situations de travail et d'emploi aujourd'hui. Elle met en exergue l'écart devenu structurel et structurant de la relation d'emploi entre les idéaux types des catégories instituées et la réalité des pratiques socio-professionnelles, variées et ne rentrant dans aucun cadre binaire. Au cours de sa trajectoire professionnelle, l'individu est confronté à des combinaisons variées de situations d'emploi et de travail, de contrats de travail aussi et à des choix multiples, que la typologie sur les figures émergentes illustre. Plus particulièrement, cette publication interroge les dispositifs dont se saisissent les acteurs, la façon dont le droit du travail et les formes d'organisation du travail sont génératrices d'inégalités. Sont aussi abordées les conséquences des nouvelles formes de travail sur l'organisation des travailleurs, les possibilités de négociation qui en ressortent et la question des chemins empruntés pour garantir la pérennité des droits acquis. Ces thèmes fournissent un panorama diversifié des transformations des relations d'emploi et des relations professionnelles dans des univers différenciés. La démarche adoptée conduit à interroger le rapport entre le public et le privé et, implicitement, le lien entre le collectif et l'individu, à une époque où l'individualisation des relations d'emploi et de travail tend à s'étendre.

Determinants, Consequences and Perspectives of Land Reform Politics in Newly Industrializing Countries

A Comparison of the Indian and the South African Case

This comparative case study addresses central determinants of inequalities that persist in India and South Africa. The particular focus of the study is on programs aiming at the redistribution of land to the landless poor and these programs' consequences. The central question is why extreme inequalities persist despite land redistribution programs that have been in place for decades and what role different actors and dominant ideas play in this. Beyond this empirical focus, the study transcends theoretical cleavages in the social sciences by following the basic ideas of Giddens' Structural Theory. An actor-centred approach is chosen as the primary tool for analysis. It is complemented with a structural approach to discourse analysis for a detailed analysis of actors' preferences.

Political Systems of the Former Yugoslavia

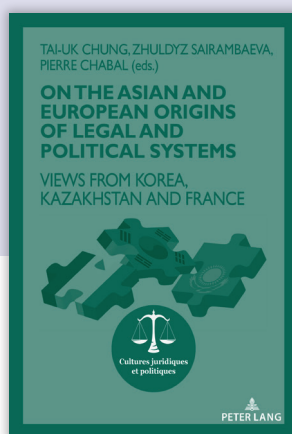

Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, Kosovo, Macedonia, Montenegro, Serbia, and Slovenia

This collection of essays offers a comprehensive analysis of the political systems of post-Yugoslav states. The first three chapters constitute a necessary introduction to subsequent analyses of individual states, reflecting on the specificity of the Balkan region, its political history, and the character of political transformations that are still taking place. In their analyses of the political systems of individual nation-states, the authors follow a similar pattern, focusing on the following aspects: the evolution of the political system, the constitution and basic principles of the political system, the parliament, the head of state, the government, the judiciary, and the system of political parties.

On The Asian and European Origins of Legal and Political Systems

Views from Korea, Kazakhstan and France

This book analyses the legal and political systems of three different regions of the Asian/Eurasian continent. More precisely it compares the origins of such systems as both the ancient foundations inherited from the past and the founding principles of modern systems today. It suggests that the European constructions, the East-Asian dynamics and the Centralasian transitions, often studied separately or at best in a comparison of only two of them, ought to be approached as three variations on a theme. The value for the readers and the challenge for the authors is to situate these origins within both legal norms and traditions, whether Latin or Asian, as well as within modern Anglo-Saxon common-law dimensions and remnants of the Soviet system. After Le régionalisme et ses limites (Peter Lang, 2016) and Mutations de société et réponses du droit (Peter Lang, 2017), this book furthers international, comparative research presented at conferences in Kazakhstan in 2014, France in 2016 and Korea in 2017. It covers i) law and politics in modern State-building, ii) formation and development of civil and economic law, iii) constitutionalism in Asia and in Europe, iv) international law and international relations.

Crisis Governance in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia and Serbia

The Study of Floods in 2014

This comparative study at hand has been the result of a two-year research project on floods in 2014 in the Western Balkans engaging eight research teams from Bosnia and Herzegovina, Serbia and Croatia. Representing quite different disciplines, the authors of this volume have analysed diverse aspects of the crisis governance and its ramifications. This publication's goals are twofold. Firstly, it pins down the characteristics of the crisis responses during the floods of 2014 in three affected countries, preconditioned by the existing institutions, crisis leadership, the role of media and the social capital as well as the foreign financial aid. On the other hand, through the lenses of the crisis governance we conclude on the state capacities and the nature of political regime of the cases under study. The flood megacrisis did not constitute a «window of opportunity» for individual or institutional learning. On the contrary, it did unveil some authoritarian tendencies in Serbia and Bosnia, and thus stalled the hitherto ongoing democratization process.

L'État dans tous ses états

Depuis l'avènement de l'État moderne au 17^e siècle, l'État a connu de nombreuses évolutions. De l'idée d'État-nation en passant par celle d'État-providence, le concept s'est imposé dans nos sociétés contemporaines. Toutefois, son affirmation en tant que forme d'organisation du pouvoir politique s'accompagne également de questionnements croissants. L'État a-t-il la capacité de répondre aux enjeux nationaux et internationaux actuels ? Soumis à un grand nombre de contraintes tant internes qu'externes, dispose-t-il encore d'une marge de manœuvre ? Est-il en voie de transformation, voire de disparition ? Cet ouvrage collectif a pour objectif d'apporter un éclairage original à ces interrogations. Construit autour de trois grands axes de réflexion mettant tous les aspects de l'État en question, il est un terrain d'échange entre plusieurs disciplines des sciences sociales. Mêlant réflexions théoriques et études de cas, il vise à enrichir le débat sur les évolutions de l'État dans une perspective pluridisciplinaire.

Bangladesh

Political and Literary Reflections
on a Divided Country

Bangladesh is now divided as «our» country and «their» country. This division has been solely created by the critically close to authoritarian and exclusionary Awami regime—belligerent and BNPhobic. This book is a detailed account of the divided Bangladesh, where there has been a near-total suppression and extermination (since 2009) of the political opposition, BNP. It is a recount of the horror and terror resorted to by the regime addicted to governing the country through a process of complete politicization and criminalization of all the branches of the state. Being a descriptive narrative of the regime's abuses of state tools and agents, the volume launches a crusade against the nearly autocratic and despotic one-party government, boastfully bragging about its denial of moral, political, and economic corruption and its obstruction of the democratic rights of the opposition.

Public-Private Partnership in the Cultural Sector

A Comparative Analysis of European Models

This book contributes to the debate on the emerging governance systems and management models of the cultural sector by means of a comparative analysis of significant case studies of public-private partnerships in Europe. The research focuses on the development of public-private collaborations over the last five decades and investigates the emergence of multi-stakeholder partnerships in the cultural and creative field. The results of the analysis are interpreted in light of the discussion on the need to create integrated cultural systems at a local level that bring together cultural organizations, public authorities, citizens and communities. These territorial cultural ecosystems could unlock the potential of the cultural and creative sector and stimulate new ways to promote the cultural identity of the territory, giving a new role to cultural and creative organizations.

Fair Cooperation

A New Paradigm for Cultural Diplomacy and Arts Management

European cultural policy is based on the exchange of artists. It has devoted decades to the objective of encouraging dialogue and enabling cooperative production; especially between the countries of the so-called 'Global North' and 'Global South'. Cultural policy makers and agents in Europe, such as those working in cultural institutions and at the ministries responsible for cultural relations, constantly stress their claims of a 'dialogue of equals'. However, if and how cultural cooperations really are in practice brought to life on equal terms is an open question. Annika Hampel analyzes the working conditions of partnerships to understand how current artistic collaborations function, what structures and processes they involve, on what premises and within what frameworks the collaborators work, and what challenges they have to cope with. The foundation of her reflections are the experiences and insights of actors in cooperative projects who are responsible for the implementation of the goals of the European Cultural Policies in practice. Annika Hampel uses five case studies, which offer insights across the spectrum of artistic cooperation, to display the wide range of Indo-German collaborations in the arts. From her analysis of the practical reality, Annika Hampel develops and proposes cultural and political measures to foster a new culture of international cooperation on an equal footing. The author shows how to minimize power relations, promote cultural diversity, and exploit the underused potential of cooperative work.

Le lobbying en France

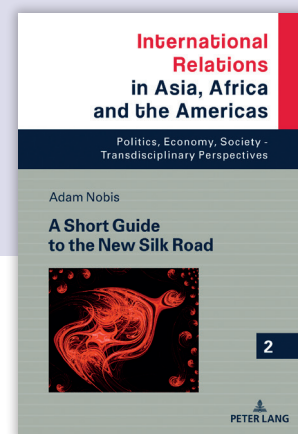

Invention et normalisation d'une pratique politique

Cet ouvrage, résultat de quinze années d'enquêtes, aborde aussi bien la formation des lobbyistes que les scandales médiatisés. Il souhaite, en cinq temps, dépassionner le débat en apportant des réponses aux questions que se posent les journalistes, les hommes politiques ou les citoyens : « combien sont-ils ? », « sont-ils influents ? », etc. Les cinq temps de l'ouvrage suivent la progression de l'invention du lobbying en France. Le premier revient sur la fabrication d'un problème autour du lobbying dans la vie politique française et explique comment l'équation lobbying/corruption a été inventée. Le deuxième temps permet de comprendre comment les français ont été amenés à parler d'histoires de lobbying alors que le mot ne renvoyait qu'à des phénomènes américains avant les années 1950. Cette conversion ne signifie pas que le lobbying soit admis. Au contraire, le plus souvent, il irrite, énerve et alimente la critique du système politique. Les troisième et quatrième temps portent sur les lobbyistes eux-mêmes et présentent les résultats obtenus grâce aux enquêtes menées sur 717 lobbyistes et 155 cabinets conseil. Cette approche permet de comprendre comment le lobbying est devenu un marché dans la vie politique et comment ces professionnels se concurrencent et s'opposent. Enfin, le dernier temps se confronte à la question la plus difficile : en quoi les lobbyistes sont-ils influents ? À l'heure où la France se dote de la première loi se donnant comme objectif de réguler le lobbying, cet ouvrage apporte un éclairage nouveau sur ce phénomène qui n'a, à ce jour, jamais fait l'objet de telles enquêtes.

A Short Guide to the New Silk Road

Most social scientists are familiar with the concept of the Silk Road. In recent years, however, it is the New Silk Road that has been on the lips of many. This short guide is addressed to all those eager to learn more about this new road. The New Silk Road resembles the old road in that it represents an ensemble of relationships and connections among several distant places. The author depicts some of them and presents people, institutions and projects connected to the road. Moreover, the various meanings and values attributed to the new road by different people across the world are explored. The book seeks to reveal the implications and meanings the New Silk Road has for the world we inhabit and for its future. «Adam Nobis's [...] is a much-needed, relevant and interesting publication. It is relevant because it addresses processes unfolding before our eyes and impacting our real, socio-cultural world. It is interesting, for it discusses these processes in an original way and competently combines synthesis with analysis. It is much-needed as it offers the readers a wealth of detailed information about the developments it depicts.» Leszek Kopciuch, Maria Curie-Skłodowska University, Lublin «This modestly-sized book is an outcome of the author's painstakingly meticulous effort to put together scattered pieces into an imposing mosaic that is the New Silk Road. [...] With Nobis's guide in hand, the reader can feel at ease traversing, both physically and imaginatively, the paths that stretch between China and Europe.» Leszek Koczanowicz, SWPS University of Social Sciences and Humanities, Warsaw

Antifragility of Islamic Finance

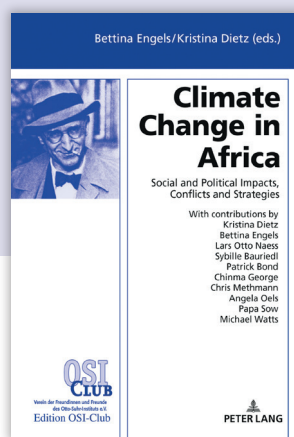

The Risk-Sharing Alternative

Antifragility of Islamic Finance: The Risk-Sharing Alternative explains how risk-sharing, as defined under Islamic finance, makes financial systems antifragile. It highlights the benefits of 100% equity-based finance over debt-based finance. The recent financial crisis has given rise to discussions on a new approach to risk management called antifragility. This concept specifies conditions under which systems become resilient to shocks caused by Black Swans—highly unpredictable outlier events that have a major negative (or positive) consequence when they occur, with their occurrence only explained retrospectively. Per this concept, the long-term survivability of any system centers exclusively on its antifragile nature, that is, its ability to absorb and even benefit from Black Swan-type shocks. This book aims to investigate risk-sharing Islamic finance as an antifragile system. As a by-product of the Great Recession, the problems of debt-based financial systems are starting to be highlighted by industry and by academia. The antifragile solution for avoiding future financial crises is primarily centered on moving the existing financial system towards more equity and less debt, thereby introducing skin-in-the-game into financial transactions. This book introduces a model of a 100% equity-based financial system, centered on risk sharing, as a possible alternative to the contemporary debt-based, conventional financial system, which is based on risk transfer and on risk shifting. In essence, this book attempts to provide a practical model for an antifragile financial system by evaluating the characteristics of Islamic finance under the criteria of antifragility.

Climate Change in Africa

Social and Political Impacts, Conflicts, and Strategies

This volume deals with the consequences of climate change and issues of international climate policy relating to Africa from a social science perspective. The contributions by international authors question dominant political approaches and key concepts of the climate debate. They explain how the effects of climate change are linked to existing social, economic and political-institutional structures and action by the State. The authors show how social movements in Africa shape climate policy «from below». The volume serves as an introduction into climate change in Africa. It wants to stimulate a critical debate on dominant strategies and points out that there can be no simple answers to the complex socio-ecological and political challenges linked to climate change in Africa.

The United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon

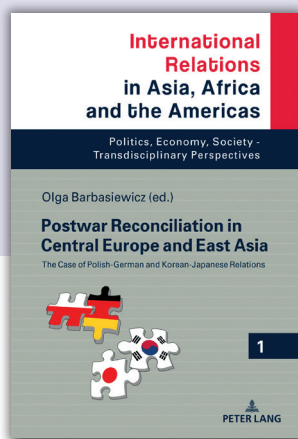

Multiple Perspectives on a Multinational Peace Operation

UN Peacekeeping is a complex endeavor resting on multinational partnership in strained contexts. Diverse national interests, doctrines, policies, and cultures come together in one operation to pursue common goals defined by the UN Security Council. They do so with usually ambiguous mandates and often find themselves operating in intricate environments. This is particularly true in the case of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon. The UNIFIL has been deployed since 1978 in South Lebanon to prevent hostilities between Israel and non-state actors operating from the Lebanese territory. Over the decades, it has witnessed significant shifts in its security and political environments yet survived them. The Force and its mandate have been significantly strengthened in the aftermath of the 2006 war between Israel and Hezbollah. Its large contingent often draws from over thirty troop-contributing countries. Combined with a volatile political and strategic context, this diversity makes the UNIFIL a particularly interesting case to study the various challenges facing multinational peacekeeping. This book brings together researchers and practitioners from various backgrounds, including from the two beneficiaries of the UNIFIL – Lebanon and Israel. Grounding their contributions either on first-hand experience or on fieldwork, the authors address a variety of issues affecting a peace mission such as the UNIFIL.

Postwar Reconciliation in Central Europe and East Asia

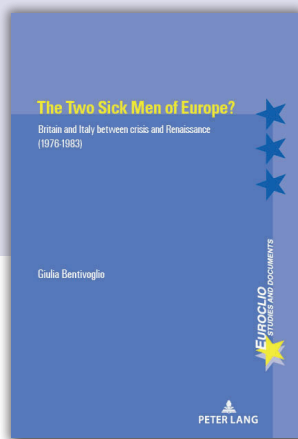

The Case of Polish-German and Korean-Japanese Relations

The Cold War in Europe and Asia has lastingly affected the postwar reconciliation processes: Korea and Germany remained divided into two countries, Japan evolved into the closest ally of its past enemy, and Poland, which was among the Allies of World War II, was left under the influence of the Soviet Union. In view of their complicated postwar history, these countries can serve as examples for comparison of the postwar reconciliation processes. This book addresses the case of Central Europe and East Asia – regions which suffered from war atrocities and still have to cope with their war experiences. The aim is to identify tools to implement a strategy of rapprochement between past enemies who need to find solutions for their coexistence in the contemporary world.

The Two Sick Men of Europe?

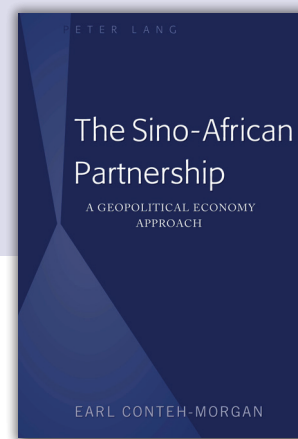

Britain and Italy between Crisis and Renaissance (1976-1983)

At first glance, there could be few countries more diverse than Britain and Italy: one the cradle of democracy, a model for most other parliamentary systems; the other a young nation and the essence of political instability. Yet despite the differences, from the mid 1970s London and Rome shared a common destiny of struggle against the crisis which eventually led them to a new «renaissance» by the early 1980s. Drawing on a wide range of sources, this volume fills an important historiographical gap, casting new light on the unexplored relations between Britain and Italy during the Cold War. The «Italian case» concerned all the major Western powers: Italy was generally perceived as the great «sick man of Europe», and her very democratic solidity appeared to be challenged, while also seemingly threatening the stability of the continent and the East-West balance of power. Yet there was another «sick man» in the Old Continent: in those years, Britain was to face a severe economic and monetary crisis which weakened her international stance and forced her to play the double role of «doctor» of the Italian disease while being a «patient» herself. It is a tale of two crises, and two ways out of them.

The Sino-African Partnership

A Geopolitical Economy Approach

The Sino-African Partnership portrays with rigor and clarity the relationship between China and Africa by delving into the geopolitical, geo-economic, and sociocultural dynamics that underlie the extensive and deepening «South-South» cooperation between the two. The analysis highlights China's role in the partnership by underscoring its geo-strategy, multidimensional approach, and the nature of its power projection in a continent of nation-states with differing geo-strategic importance and resource endowments. Supported by a rich texture of recent historical, political, and economic insights and interactions between China and Africa reflecting established knowledge, the book also delves deep into the impact on China of globalization imperatives following the end of the Cold War and its focus on ideological rivalry. Graduate and undergraduate students, China-Africa scholars, and general readers interested in a new perspective on the relationship between the two entities will find this essential and interesting reading. It is a unique and multidimensional examination of bilateral and multilateral cooperation, relationships, and profound development in global politics between two significant developing actors. There are new insights in this study into China's power projection into Africa and the global reactions spawned by its many activities.

Towards Europe

The Story of a Reluctant Norway

Does Norway belong to Western Europe? This provocative question, put to the head of the Norwegian delegation to the conference on the reconstruction of Europe after World War II, begins the history of Norwegian attitudes towards European integration. From 1905 to 1994, Norway opposed practically all types of European and international cooperation. Had Norway's views gained traction, Europe and the world would look very different today. Towards Europe demonstrates how little Norwegians knew before the 1994 referendum about the EU Single Market and the European Economic Area (EEA). The book takes the reader behind the scenes of secret negotiations between the EU and Norway, giving an unprecedented insight into how the EEA works in practice. It illustrates with concrete examples Norway's ability to articulate its views and to be heard in Brussels, from the perspective of both government and interest groups. It also looks at Norway's potential to tackle future EU challenges such as the Energy Union, migration policies, transatlantic trade and the Banking Union. Towards Europe will provide the reader with pertinent insights into whether the EEA is a suitable alternative for Britain's future relations with the EU. This edition includes an extra chapter on how to influence the EU from a non-member country.

Re-rising Japan

Its Strategic Power in International Relations

«The lost two decades» of Japan's economic power since the early 1990s have generated the image among scholars in the discipline of international relations (IR) that Japan is no longer a significant player. Hence, today's IR literature focuses on the rise of China. Re-rising Japan: Its Strategic Power in International Relations challenges this trend by showing up-to-date evidence that Japan is still a major power in today's international relations where the interests and power of the United States and China have increasingly clashed over many issues. Indeed, since the Abe cabinet re-emerged in December 2012, there has been growing academic interest in Japan's bold monetary/financial/social policies (Abenomics) and relatively assertive security policy. Where is Japan heading, and what path has it taken since the 2000s? This book responds to these questions. Re-rising Japan assembles the latest studies on Japan written by today's young and energetic scholars. It consists of three parts: (1) Geopolitics, (2) Domestic Political-Social Norms and Values, and (3) Asian Regional Integration and Institutionalizations. The individual chapters reveal what power assets Japan has and their strength and weakness in today's international relations. Readers will attain a complete picture of Japan and its evolving new strategy in the decaying U.S. unipolar system where China has been behaving as a revisionist state.

Die Erweiterungen der G7

Macht, Wohlstand und Ideen als Bestimmungsfaktoren des institutionellen Wandels

Als Zusammenschluss der führenden westlich orientierten Staaten ist die G7 eine der zentralen Institutionen der internationalen Politik. Seit ihrer Entstehung im Jahr 1975 wurde die G7 durch die Hinzuziehung zusätzlicher Teilnehmer mehrfach erweitert, bis sie im Jahr 2009 schließlich ihre maximale Größe erreichte. Die Studie zeichnet diese oftmals umstrittenen Erweiterungen nach und rekonstruiert sie anhand der Bestimmungsfaktoren «politische Macht», «wirtschaftlicher Wohlstand» und «Ideen». Hierdurch entsteht ein umfassendes Bild der Genese der G7 entlang der großen Umbrüche der Weltpolitik von den wirtschaftlichen Krisen der 1970er Jahre über das Ende des Kalten Krieges bis zum Aufstieg der Schwellenländer und der G20 im frühen 21. Jahrhundert.

Albert Einstein

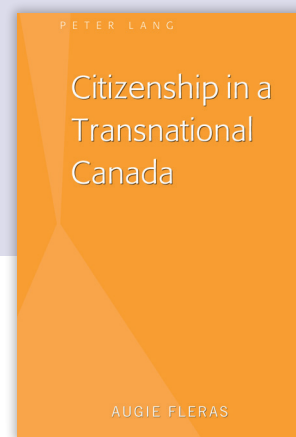

The Roads to Pacifism

Albert Einstein (1879–1955) is universally known as the father of the theory of relativity; however, he was also one of the most eminent pacifists of the first half of the twentieth century. Through his active, pragmatic and nuanced breed of pacifism, he sought to confront the dilemmas and problems stemming from the unstable political conditions of his time: the beginning of the Great War, the creation and failure of the League of Nations, the emergence of totalitarian regimes, the outbreak of the Second World War, the dawn of the Atomic Age, the escalation of the Cold War, the establishment of the United Nations with its apparent institutional weakness and the need for a world government. His reflections on the subject of peace led him into dialogue with the most prestigious figures of the political and cultural world: from Romain Rolland to Bertrand Russell via Georg Friedrich Nicolai, Sigmund Freud, King Albert I of Belgium, Léo Szilárd, Emery Reves and Franklin Delano Roosevelt (amongst others). This dialogue is further emphasized by the book's final section, an anthology of Einstein's writings and speeches, which significantly enriches this study.

Citizenship in a Transnational Canada

Citizenship in a Transnational Canada offers a distinct look at the prospect of rethinking citizenship in a contested world of shifting narratives, evolving models, ongoing challenges, and future possibilities. The book's central theme embodies a critical awareness that we no longer live in a national citizenship world but rather in one reorganized around the emergent realities, discourses, and practices of a postcitizenship world that is reshaping how we think, talk, and do citizenship. A new vocabulary is thus required for thinking, talking, and doing citizenship if there is any hope of formulating a narrative consistent with a world of posts, trans, and isms. The book is also premised on the assumption that the citizenship concept is experiencing an identity crisis («what it is?») and a crisis of confidence («what should it be doing?») in an increasingly diverse, changing, and complex world, disenchanted with the certainties of the past although unsure of what lies in store. New citizenship narratives and practices are emerging that not only challenge the conventional citizenship model of a single nation-state within a territorially bounded framework but also capitalize on the complexities of transmigrant identities across a networked web of transnational linkages, post-national realities, and a postmulticultural world of diverse-diversities. No less salient are the post-colonial politics that accompany the politicization of Indigenous peoples' citizenship arrangements commensurate with their constitutional status as «the (de facto) sovereigns within». The paradoxes and possibilities that accompany the conceptual makeover of national citizenship regimes along «postcitizenship» lines are explored as well across the settler domains of Canada and (to a lesser extent) the United States, Aotearoa/New Zealand, and Australia.

Demokratie – Ein interdisziplinäres Forschungsprojekt

Demokratie, die bis vor kurzem als selbstverständliche Errungenschaft galt, wird gegenwärtig massiv in Frage gestellt. Durch Modernisierungs- und Globalisierungsprozesse, ökonomische Krisen, rechtspopulistische Politikstrategien, Dynamiken der Diskriminierung und Exklusion, extremistische Einstellungen und terroristische Bedrohungen gerät Demokratie gegenwärtig in eine Krise. Die Komplexität dieser gesellschaftlichen Problemfelder analysieren die Autor_innen aus interdisziplinärer Perspektive. Wissenschaftler_innen aus verschiedenen wissenschaftlichen Arbeits- und Forschungsbereichen setzen sich mit der Krise der Demokratie, aber auch mit Möglichkeiten ihrer Weiterentwicklung auseinander.

Privatizing Democracy

Global Ideals, European Politics and Basque Territories

Democratization is a process of collective emancipation through self-government. Continuous political contestation is essential for emancipation but, in order to know which strategies and conditions will emancipate us, we also need to know which ones subjugate us. Political mechanisms with the capacity to modulate our individual and collective bodies and make them docile tend to be close relatives of those which make us equal and free. Drawing on the latest theories concerning globalization and democracy, this book argues that postnational and postsovereign multi-level governance regimes, including the European Union, should be understood as mechanisms of global capitalism aimed at privatizing democracy. Through a detailed applied analysis of the Basque case, the author illustrates how democratization is closely linked to ideas about territory, collective empowerment and institutional political capacity. Democratization always takes place partially: it never «ends». Contrary to the dominant thinking, this book argues that the incomplete nature of democratization is a positive aspect, with perpetual conflict leading to perpetual change. This is precisely what allows, and obliges, each generation to shape its own forms of emancipation.

On Property and Ownership Relations

A Return to the Social Theory of Karl Marx

This book comprises a systematic analysis of Karl Marx's reasoning on ownership. Marx as the author of an original theory of ownership is yet to be discovered. The creator of a theory which was to interpret social reality is quite a different thinker from the creator of a doctrine which was to alter the world. In designing communist society, Marx ignored the threats which social property bears, despite having skillfully identified them in investigations of diverse pre-capitalistic forms of common ownership. The author seeks to break through one-sided interpretations which discern in Marx a decisive critique of private property and an apologia of common ownership. It becomes apparent that Marx treated both the processes of socialization and privatization of ownership with equal consideration.

Erinnerung als Mobilisierungsressource im Vorfeld ethnisierter Gewaltkonflikte

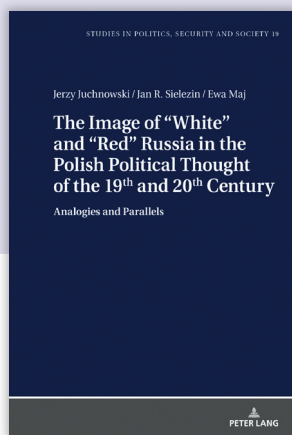

Das Beispiel Nordossetien – Inguschetien, 1989–1992

Die Autorin untersucht Erinnerungsprozesse im Vorfeld der Konflikteskalation im Prigorodnyj Rajon (Nordossetien). Geschichte und Erinnerung sind in den meisten Gesellschaften umkämpft: sie werden zu Konfliktgegenständen und sie dienen Konfliktakteuren als Argumente für ihre jeweiligen Positionen. Das Buch verbindet Konzepte der Erinnerungsforschung mit Ansätzen der Friedens- und Konfliktforschung. Eine Diskursanalyse von rund 600 Zeitungsartikeln verdeutlicht, wo und wie Vergangenheitsbezüge im Mobilisierungsprozess zum Tragen kamen. Narrative Interviews machen die Perspektive der im Konflikt mobilisierten Bevölkerung sichtbar. Dabei zeigt sich, dass familiäre Erinnerung bei gleichzeitiger Verschränkung von Information und Emotion die Wahrnehmung öffentlich vermittelter Erinnerungen entscheidend beeinflusst.

The Image of «White» and «Red» Russia in the Polish Political Thought of the 19th and 20th Century

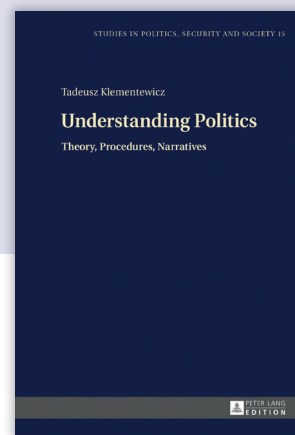

Analogies and Parallels

The aim of the book is to analyze the perception of the Tsarist and Bolshevik Russia in the Polish political thought in the 19th and 20th century. The wide and well-documented research applies an original multidisciplinary approach, combining the methods used in many disciplines, such as history, social science and social psychology. The authors of the book successfully defend the thesis that the perception of Russia cannot be fully understood without considering the «internal» aspects linked to the culture of this country in its psychological and moral dimension, as well as in its literary, architectural and artistic tradition.

Understanding Politics

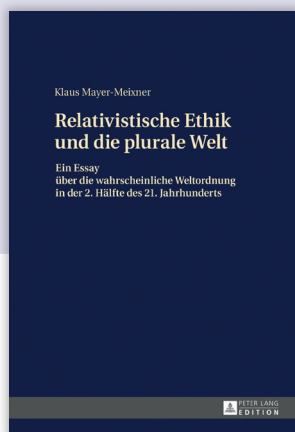

Theory, Procedures, Narratives

This book analyses how contemporary political science can develop as a structure of knowledge gathered by the individual sub-disciplines of political studies, as well as the remaining disciplines of social sciences. It helps to get a fuller understanding of political phenomena and to reconstruct the process of emergence of the global civilisation. The author reflects about the current state of research conducted by political scientists. The research is conducted within a few major research paradigms. This work presents a strategy of integrating knowledge about man and society.

Die relativistische Ethik und die neue plurale Welt

Ein Essay über die wahrscheinliche Weltordnung in der 2. Hälfte des 21. Jahrhunderts

Die relativistische Ethik und die politische Pluralität liefern die neue politische Weltordnung. Das bereits 1789 erfundene politische Relativitätssystem, an das der Autor anknüpft, steht gegen den Jahrtausende alten Politdarwinismus reiner Machtausübung. Offensichtlich befinden sich die großen alten Imperien und Hegemonien derzeit in einem Zerfallsprozess. Sie stehen für die Vergangenheit. Auf der Seite der Zukunft entwickelt sich hingegen die neue Welt eines globalen politischen Pluralismus. Diese neue Welt besteht aus einer größeren oder großen Zahl souveräner Staaten und souveräner Staaten-Communitys. Sie werden jeweils mehrheitlich das Kunststück vollbringen, ihre gemeinsamen Rechtsgrundlagen aus ihrer Vielfalt heraus zu definieren.

Culture(s) in International Relations

This book presents a critical reflection on how the presence of «culture» in theory and practice of international relations is reflected in International Relations as a research field. The authors analyze culture in International Relations scholarship and evaluate culture in the practice of International Relations, as well as in International Law. The contemporary social sciences have put culture on a pedestal. The proliferation of the meanings associated with the notion of what culture is, has gone very far. The results of analyses presented in this book are meant to contribute to solving the existing confusion, to identify the research fields in IR where culture appears.

Hard, Soft, and Smart Power – Education as a Power Resource

In the current global context, there is a shift in power paradigm from the rigid realpolitik perspective towards the inclusion of multiple faces of power. This publication focuses on the power forms identified by Joseph Nye: hard, soft, and smart, and evaluates education as a resource of power. Resource ambiguity is one of the key shortcomings of soft power theory. Education is a smart power resource since it has both hard and soft power characteristics. The case study of Kazakhstan reveals that international educational programs allow education to become a power resource.

Das Militär in der politischen Kultur der Türkei

Die Studie befasst sich mit dem politisch-kulturellen Einfluss des türkischen Militärs. Dabei stehen die militärisch produzierten und vermittelten Deutungs- und Sinnmuster im Mittelpunkt der Analyse. Durch den Rückgriff auf die Ansätze der politischen Kulturforschung und der Foucaultschen Machtanalytik entwickelt der Autor einen theoretisch-analytischen Rahmen zur Analyse militärischer Deutungs- und Sinnmuster. Auf der Grundlage des Forschungsinstrumentariums der politischen Deutungs- und Soziokultur und der Foucaultschen Diskurs- und Machtanalyse werden solche Muster kritisch durchleuchtet. Durch eine historische Diskursanalyse werden die militärischen Deutungsmuster in politischen Deutungs- und Soziokulturen herausgearbeitet und kritisch auf ihre politisch-kulturellen Effekte hin untersucht.

Aménagement rural et qualification territoriale

Les indications géographiques en France et en Europe

L'objectif de cet ouvrage est triple : il pose d'abord la question du rôle de la qualité, comme concept et outil, et des ressources territoriales dans le développement local et l'aménagement rural. Il permet ensuite, à travers les questions de l'enjeu de l'alimentation, de la gestion des espaces ruraux et du foncier, d'interroger les instruments de la qualification territoriale à partir de l'exemple des Appellations d'Origines Protégées (AOP) et les Indications Géographiques Protégées (IGP). Ces instruments offrent des opportunités de dynamisation des territoires et interrogent les nouveaux enjeux de l'aménagement du territoire rural en France et en Europe. Enfin, il met en débat un cadre théorique sur la qualification territoriale par croisement des diverses politiques rurales de la qualité. Ce livre aborde successivement les questions des trajectoires de la qualification et des ressources territoriales à partir de terrains français « englobés » pour partie dans des logiques métropolitaines. Plus largement, l'action publique locale montre que la qualité est aujourd'hui attendue et réclamée par la société et conditionne souvent la mise en œuvre de solutions spécifiques d'aménagement des espaces. Tout en mobilisant une approche interdisciplinaire, cette étude contribue à élargir le champ de l'aménagement de l'espace en incluant les questions de la connaissance, mais aussi de la cognition spatiale à travers différents statuts de l'espace rural, dans des contextes économiques et géographiques variés.

Le care, face morale du capitalisme

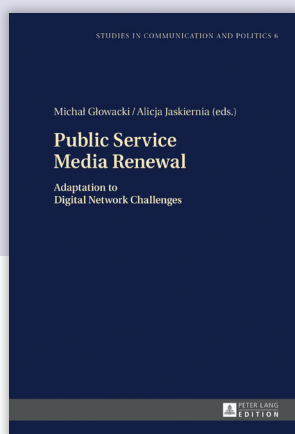

Assistance et police des familles en Amérique latine

L'Amérique latine est souvent considérée comme un laboratoire de politiques publiques, qui accompagnent le développement de formes néo-libérales de capitalisme. Après les années 2000, l'État social signe son « retour », marqué par une nouvelle génération de politiques sociales d'assistance dites conditionnelles, dans des contextes de réduction des dépenses publiques, d'extension de la marchandisation et d'intense concurrence politique. Cet ouvrage explore les nébuleuses d'acteurs engendrées par la mise en pratique de ces politiques, à partir d'enquêtes ethnographiques menées dans cinq métropoles d'Amérique latine. Il montre comment elles instituent une police des familles, centrée sur les femmes et fondée sur une économie morale valorisant l'éthique du care et de la responsabilité. La gestion et la répartition du travail reproductif s'opèrent par des dispositifs d'activation, d'incitations comportementales et de contrôle de proximité. Ce mode de gouvernement moral des pauvres tend à instaurer un ordre politique qui organise la reproduction sociale et économique et repose sur une division du travail entre sexes, générations et classes sociales. Il nourrit l'essor des opportunités de profit marchand et des positions d'intermédiation. Cette face morale des politiques économiques néolibérales a permis un compromis de gouvernement, qui s'est estompé. S'il se démarque de ce cadre général, le cas de Cuba, aux prises avec une réforme de sa politique sociale, confirme la centralité du care et des injonctions morales dans les politiques publiques.

Public Service Media Renewal

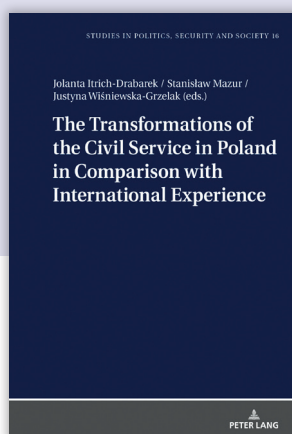

Adaptation to Digital Network Challenges

This book analyses the adaptivity of public service media (PSM) to the digital network age. The authors use specific case studies and research initiatives, involving a variety of methodological and theoretical approaches, to argue that current changes in media and society offer a wide range of possibilities for PSM renewal. Changes in PSM are analysed through the lenses of shifts in users' behavior and the growing importance of big data, machine mediation and developing partnership systems alongside other agents in the overall media ecology. The authors map the potential mental, regulatory, institutional and financial indicators which might restrict the ways in which PSM adapts. They argue that PSM renewal is possible as long as PSM policy-makers and managers both recognize and understand the drivers for, and obstacles to, change.

The Transformations of the Civil Service in Poland in Comparison with International Experience

This book is the outcome of in-depth academic research on the civil service carried out by acknowledged international and national experts in the field. It brings together papers and speeches presented at the international symposium «The civil service in Poland: 20 years of experience and the outlook for change», which was organized at the University of Warsaw. The authors summarise the studies on the transformations in the civil service systems in European and other countries, especially those pertaining to Anglo-Saxon culture. They also aim to provoke deeper reflections on the process of establishing the civil service in Poland, especially against the background of the legislative changes introduced in late 2015 and early 2016.

Austerity and the Implementation of the Europe 2020 Strategy in Spain

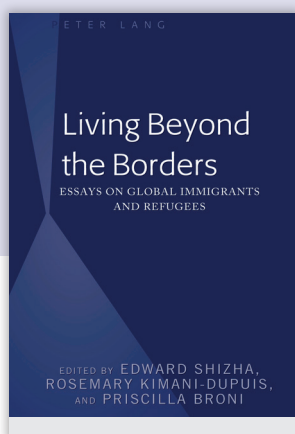

Re-shaping the European Productive and Social Model: a Reflexion from the South

This book adopts a critical perspective to analyze the Europe-2020 Strategy and its effects on the transformation of the European productive and social model, particularly in Spain. The evidence provided in this book suggests that the Europe-2020 strategy cannot be dissociated from the policies of commodification initiated in the Stability and Growth Pact (Maastricht, 1997) nor from the Austerity measures implemented to deal with the financial crisis in 2007. These policies of «commodification» and «austerity» are seriously limiting Europe-2020 capacity to foster a smart, sustainable and inclusive productive transition, while adding greatly to the continuous process of precarization and social exclusion that European societies are suffering, especially in Southern Europe. The book presents empirical evidence on these externalities in areas as diverse as EU foreign policy, entrepreneurship or gender equality. But the special emphasis has been placed in those areas that the Europe 2020 strategy considers crucial such as employment, R&D, climate change and energy sustainability, education and fighting against poverty in Spain. Thanks to the profuse analyses carried out by a group of leading Spanish academics, the book constitutes a benchmark for scholars, practitioners and the general public interested in European and Spanish economic policy issues.

Living Beyond the Borders

Essays on Global Immigrants and Refugees

Cross-border migration has resulted in many social, cultural, economic, and political challenges that need attention. Globalization, migration, and transnationalism have a strong impact on the lives of diasporic immigrants and refugees. Transnationalism and diaspora, which result from globalization and migration, create transnational social spaces, fields, and formations that affect the everyday practices and engagements of migrants and refugees. Living Beyond the Borders highlights the Canadian immigration policies and the challenges faced by migrants, particularly visible minorities. The book further presents multiple perspectives and arguments on how immigrants and refugees react to their «new home» in the north and how they maintain memories of their country of origin. The contributors to this volume analyze the impact of transnational lives on the identity construction of migrants and how they acquire and negotiate their multiple identities. The book further interrogates these identities by questioning the experiences of immigrants and refugees living precarious lives in their country of permanent or temporary settlement. This book contributes knowledge and literature that is intended for academic scholars, researchers, and undergraduate and graduate students in the fields of immigration studies, global studies, sociology, political science, development studies, and interdisciplinary studies. Its multidisciplinary approach has significant value to readers, as it integrates perspectives on the multidimensionality and complexity of transnational migration, settlement, and integration in the contemporary globalized world.

Talking Past Each Other

Quebec and the Federal Dialogue
in Canada, 1867-2017

In Talking Past Each Other: Quebec and the Federal Dialogue in Canada, 1867-2017, Hamish Telford provides an engaging account of the long-running dialogue between the governments of Quebec and Canada on the meaning and purpose of federalism. He argues that the government of Canada has adopted a theory of federalism that enables it to address most issues of «national» importance to the federation irrespective of the formal division of powers in the constitution. The theory of «majoritarian federalism», as he calls it, allows the government of Canada to promote «national» unity and the universality of citizenship. By contrast, Quebec's theory of federalism, which he calls «difference federalism», stresses the importance of provincial autonomy, so as to allow each province, most especially Quebec, to preserve and promote its particularity. These definitions represent irreconcilable constitutional premises. The governments of Canada and Quebec have thus quite literally been «talking past each other» for the last 150 years. Talking Past Each Other is the first monograph in a generation to recount this story in its entirety. The book will be of considerable interest to all students of federalism, nationalism, and secession.

Die Entwicklung berufsbildender Schulen in Preußen, Sachsen und Württemberg zwischen 1869 und 1914

Ein Vergleich der preußischen, sächsischen und württembergischen
Entwicklungen im beruflichen
Schulwesen bis zum Ersten Weltkrieg

In der Hochindustrialisierungsphase zwischen 1869 und 1914 erlebte das technische Ausbildungswesen auf den Gebieten des Handels, der Industrie und des Handwerks sowie der Kunst in Verbindung mit einer Fachausbildung einen stetigen Wandlungs- und Anpassungsprozess. Die Autorin untersucht den Umwandlungsprozess des beruflichen Ausbildungswesens von der traditionellen Handwerkslehre zum modernen Ausbildungswesen in den drei Bundesstaaten Preußen, Sachsen und Württemberg während der Zeit von 1869 bis 1914. Die Untersuchung trägt dazu bei, einen Überblick über die Entwicklung des niederen und mittleren technischen Schulwesens in Preußen, Sachsen und Württemberg während dieses Zeitraums zu vermitteln. Das heutige duale Ausbildungssystem der Bundesrepublik Deutschland ist das Ergebnis einer langjährigen, tief in den Traditionen der einzelnen Bundesstaaten verwurzelten Entwicklung. Die Studie leistet einen Beitrag zum besseren Verständnis des dualen Systems.

Social capital, migration, ethnic diversity and economic performance

Multidisciplinary Evidence from South-East Europe

This interdisciplinary book brings an empirical evidence that social capital is an important building block in the reintegration processes, migration challenges and economic dynamism of the SEE communities. Such a conclusion opposes the common belief that (re)establishing social relations in a post-ethnic conflict environment is difficult, or sometimes even impossible. These are indeed societies where trust in people and institutions remains low, but it is often replaced with other forms of social capital emerging on a daily basis, within and between different population strata, either formally but often informally. Most people who know the region are aware that formal and state institutions in South-East Europe enjoy very low levels of trust. Nearly everybody loves to point to ethnicity as the causal factor behind every difficulty. The authors of this groundbreaking study explore two basic questions: how do people meet their needs and the needs of others when official institutions do not function? And how do members of different ethnic groups experience the role of others and cross symbolic boundaries? The answers, constructed out of empirical evidence using a variety of methods, point to the crucial importance of social capital as an everyday resource, and to the essential role of ethnic, national, and religious diversity in enhancing people's life chances in an unstable environment.

Contemporary Migrations in the Humanistic Coefficient Perspective

Florian Znaniecki's Thought in Today's Social Science Research

This book presents contributions from migration sociologists inspired by Florian Znaniecki's theory and the results of his studies to conduct their own research in countries like Austria, China, Greece and Poland. The authors evaluate today's migration phenomena with reference to a coherent theoretical system. The book can be used as a manual presenting the tools for examining the migration experience from many angles: a sense of national identity (ethnic and civic), family ties, the importance of the social environment in the process of an individual's integration with the society or an evolution of entire social systems within which the migrants operate.

Local Community, Power and European Integration

This collection of articles is the result of the research project «The Polish local society in the process of European integration – a decade of experience», financed by the Polish National Science Centre (NCN). The aim was to investigate the process of integration in the EU of six selected local Polish communities. The same six communities had been studied ten years before, when Poland was preparing for the EU accession. The research was based on qualitative methodology. The results show that the knowledge of the EU in local Poland remains at a very low level. The exception is competence in the field of EU structural funds. These funds are the main factor which determines the positive attitude of Poles towards the EU and the Polish membership in it. At the same time the process of the construction of a European identity in terms of values remains very problematic.

Jacqueline Kennedy and the Architecture of First Lady Diplomacy

This unique rhetorical analysis of First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy's communication uncovers five forms of soft diplomacy that catapult her to the top of all American first ladies as a model of international influence. Her use of interpersonal, fashion, language, cultural, and state diplomatic strategies constitutes an architectural plan of smart power. Breaking away from the stereotype of Mrs. Kennedy as a style icon, the evidence in this monograph supports her astute awareness of how to support the Kennedy Administration's foreign policy during the Cold War era by engaging state visits to Europe and South America, receiving heads of state at the White House, creating cultural ideals of freedom through art and preservation, and using French and Spanish to speak directly to the people of other countries. Her persuasive tactics set the stage for future first ladies to excel in a role that requires creativity and sound judgment. Students in communication, political science, history, rhetoric, and women's studies will benefit from this book in their own study of first ladies, the presidency, foreign policy, and Cold War history. Written in an engaging style, Jacqueline Kennedy and the Architecture of First Lady Diplomacy will appeal to a range of scholarly interests across disciplines.

The Me-Generation in a Post-Collectivist Space

Dilemmas in a Time of Transition

As a result of ongoing political transformation, post-communist countries are opening up to a global world and its influence. This poses new challenges and complicates the socialisation process of young people. In this book, the authors ask what orientation changes can follow, when they are determined by the resources of innovativeness of a young generation and structural limitations of a system. The basis of analyses were different types of national and international sources, collected in reference to nine post-communist countries in Europe and Asia. The comparison leads to a surprising conclusion: It is difficult to perceive representatives of the first generation, whose growing up has taken place only in the new political system, as «the drivers of the change».

Die rumänische Diaspora in Berlin

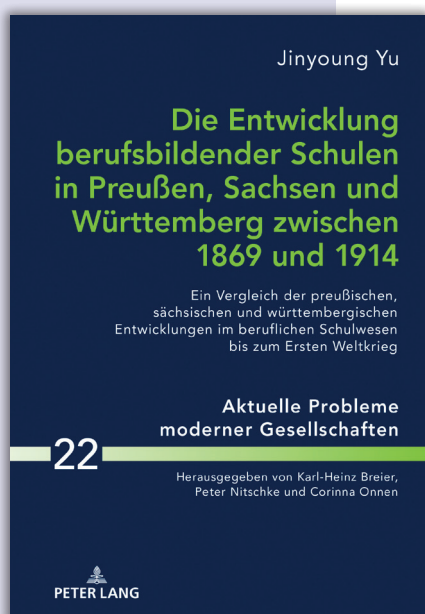

Ein Beispiel für neue Formen migrantischen Lebens

In Berlin leben seit über 150 Jahren Menschen aus Rumänien. Diese Gruppe, die rumänische Diaspora, ist heute heterogener denn je. Und sie wächst weiter an. Die Studie untersucht, wie Menschen aus Rumänien in Berlin leben. Sie erkundet die Orte dieser Diaspora und legt ihre vielfältige Geschichte in dieser Stadt frei. Dass die heutige rumänische Diaspora in Berlin eine neue Form migrantischen Lebens ist, wird anhand von Ergebnissen einer Umfrage zur sozialen Situation der MigrantInnen, ihrer Integration in Berlin und ihrer Beziehung zum Herkunftsland Rumänien dargestellt. Mit einem kritischen Blick auf die rumänische Diaspora-Politik eröffnet sich die Frage, ob die Diaspora den dringend nötigen politischen Wandel in Rumänien selbst in die Hand nehmen wird. Auch von Berlin aus.

America and Global Affairs

Edited by Jerry Pubantz and John Allphin Moore Jr.

The America and Global Affairs series publishes scholarly manuscripts that explore the intersection between the politics, broadly understood, of the world's most powerful state and the highly interdependent world of international actors and forces. Works in the series approach their subject matter through any of several lenses: political, historical, theoretical, sociological, cultural, and others. Manuscripts seek to explore American politics with regard to U.S. foreign relations, global political and economic theory, national security, global trends and issues, or conversely explore the impact of global affairs on the domestic political system, public opinion, governmental systems, or the constitutional order.

Cultural Management and Cultural Policy Education

Edited by ENCADC

The series exists to foster critical debate and to publish academic research in the field of cultural management and cultural policy as well as to open up a forum for discussions and debate on the topics of cultural management and cultural policy among scholars, educators, policy makers and cultural managers. It is also intended to provide a reference tool for education and lifelong learning on cultural management and cultural policies.

It is becoming more and more evident that education in cultural management and cultural policy cannot and should not be separated from research and being conducted in the field. Since its creation, ENCADC has recognized this need and was always very active in pursuing, publishing, presenting, and disseminating research in arts and cultural management and cultural policy to strengthen the understanding of cultural management and cultural policy issues.

Created in 1992, ENCADC is the «European Network of Cultural Administration Training Centers». It is a membership NGO gathering over 100 Higher Educational Institutions and cultural organisations in 40 countries. It holds the status of official partner of UNESCO and of observer to the Steering Committee for Culture of the Council of Europe.

Cultures juridiques et politiques

Édité par Stéphanie Rohlfing-Dijoux et Otmar Seul

Les conceptions du pouvoir, du droit et de l'ordre se réfèrent inévitablement à l'ensemble du système de représentations qu'est la culture de chaque société. Toute forme de culture ayant donc nécessairement une dimension politique et juridique, la collection Cultures juridiques et politiques publie des travaux, tels que des thèses, synthèses de recherches, ouvrages collectifs et actes de colloques, se proposant de faire connaître les systèmes politiques et juridiques des pays européens, d'évaluer les grandes tendances des processus d'intégration politique et d'harmonisation juridique en cours dans l'Union européenne et d'éclairer les interférences entre le politique, le juridique et les autres aspects « culturels » dans le contexte de ces processus.

Diversitas

Edited by Alain-G. Gagnon

The aim of this series is to study diversity by privileging an interdisciplinary approach, through political, legal, cultural and social frameworks. The proposed method of inquiry will be to appeal, at once, to the fields of political philosophy, law, political science, history and sociology. In a period characterized by the increasing diversity of contemporary societies, the authors published in this series will explore avenues for the accommodation and management of pluralism and identity. Such studies will not be limited to assessments of federal states, but will include states that are on the path to federalization as well as non-federal states. Serious efforts will be undertaken to enrich our comprehension of so-called «nations without states», most notably Catalonia, Scotland, Flanders and Quebec. A point of emphasis will also be placed on extracting lessons from experiences with civil law relative to those cases marked by the common law tradition. Monist and competing models will be compared in order to assess the relative capacity of each model to provide responses to the question of political instability, while pursuing the quest for justice in minority societies. The series also addresses the place of cities in the management of diversity, as well as the question of migration more generally and the issue of communities characterized by overlapping and hybrid identities. A profound sensitivity to historical narratives is also expected to enrich the proposed scientific approach. Finally, the works published in this series will reveal a common aspiration to advance social and political debates without privileging any particular school of thought.

Dynamiques citoyennes en Europe / Citizenship Dynamics in Europe

Edité par/Edited by Dominique Avon

La cristallisation de groupes humains pour faire « cité » est un phénomène complexe qui associe des éléments d'identification et de distinction : langue, origine géographique, genre, catégorie sociale, religion, engagement politique. Dans une perspective pluridisciplinaire, la collection « Dynamiques citoyennes en Europe » fédère les travaux autour de la problématique commune des « dynamiques citoyennes », elle-même articulée plus particulièrement sur deux axes convergents : « laïcité et religions » ; « citoyennetés et identités ». Elle accueille toutes sortes de publications scientifiques en français, anglais et allemand.

Crystallization of human groups in order to constitute a place of citizenship is a complex phenomenon associating elements of identification and distinction: language, geographical origins, social classes, religion, political commitment. Through a multidisciplinary perspective, this collection brings together the works about the common research problem of «civic dynamics», itself concentrated on two main converging aspects: «secularism and religion»; «citizenships and identities».

Enjeux internationaux / International Issues

Édité par/Edited by Eric Bussière, Michel Dumoulin et/and Sylvain Schirmann

La collection Enjeux internationaux se veut représentative de perspectives renouvelées et de leur impact sur les recherches actuelles. Sans abandonner l'étude des relations internationales centrées sur les États, elle cherche à mieux appréhender la diversité des segments qui composent le champ international et le mode de relations entre ces derniers : de l'enjeu que constitue le sport à celui de l'usage de la mémoire coloniale. Elle s'adresse ainsi aux universitaires et analystes souhaitant interroger les grandes thématiques du siècle dernier au service d'une réflexion sur le présent.

This series aims to portray new perspectives and their impact on current research. Without casting aside studies in international relations that focus on states, it tries to better understand the diverse range of factors that play out on the world stage and how they relate to each other from the high stakes in sport to the use of colonial memory. This series targets academics and analysts who wish to apply 20th century history to contemporary thought.

Euroclio

Etudes et Documents / Studies and Documents

Édité par/Edited by Eric Bussière, Michel Dumoulin et/and Antonio Varsori

Euroclio est un projet scientifique et éditorial, un réseau d'institutions de recherche et de chercheurs, un forum d'idées. « Euroclio », en tant que projet éditorial, comprend deux versants : le premier versant concerne les études et documents, le second versant les instruments de travail. L'un et l'autre visent à rendre accessibles les résultats de la recherche, mais également à ouvrir des pistes en matière d'histoire de la construction/intégration/unification européenne.

La collection Euroclio répond à un double objectif : offrir des instruments de travail, de référence, à la recherche ; offrir une tribune à celle-ci en termes de publication des résultats. La collection comprend donc deux séries répondant à ces exigences : la série « Études et Documents » et la série « Références ». Ces deux séries s'adressent aux bibliothèques générales et/ou départements d'histoire des universités, aux enseignants et chercheurs, et dans certains cas, à des milieux professionnels bien spécifiques.

Europe des cultures / Europe of cultures

Édité par/Edited by Léonce Bekemans

Europe des Cultures est une collection qui propose des études, des essais, des recherches et des comptes-rendus de conférences et de débats consacrés aux réalités culturelles dans des sociétés européennes. Le concept de culture est pris dans son sens le plus large, incluant les traditions et les comportements éthiques, sociaux, politiques, démocratiques, philosophiques, artistiques et religieux. Il se concentre sur la relation entre la gestion des diversités culturelles en Europe et le développement d'une identité commune des citoyens européens dans le cadre d'une démocratie nouvelle. La collection présente des vues interdisciplinaires et critiques de réflexions, axées sur les politiques, les valeurs et la culture.

Europe of Cultures is a series of studies, essays, research projects and reports on conferences and debates devoted to the changing cultural realities in European societies. The concept of culture is considered in its broadest sense, including ethical, social, political, democratic, philosophical, artistic and religious traditions and behaviour. The series focuses on the relationship between the evolution of cultural diversities in Europe and the development of a common identity among European citizens in the framework of an emerging new democracy. The series presents interdisciplinary and critical views of culturally-based, value-driven and policy-oriented reflections.

Federalism

Edited by the Centro Studi sul Federalismo

The book series «Federalism», run by the Centro Studi sul Federalismo/Centre for Studies on Federalism (CSF), aims to disseminate knowledge in the field of studies on federalism, as well as to feed the academic and public debate and support the activity of decision-makers, confronted with demands for autonomy by local governments, along with forms of regional and world integration needed to govern global processes.

The CSF is a think tank that carries out activities of interdisciplinary research, documentation, information regarding domestic and supra-national federalism, developments in the area of regional and continental integration first and foremost the European Union and problems related to the world order and the process of democratisation of the international system. The CSF has been founded under the auspices of the Compagnia di San Paolo and the Universities of Turin, Pavia and Milan.

Géopolitique et résolution des conflits / Geopolitics and Conflict Resolution

Edité par/Edited by Tanguy De Wilde d'Estmael

Cette collection accueille des travaux dont l'objectif est d'analyser les changements géopolitiques ayant marqué la scène européenne et mondiale depuis 1989. Au niveau européen, une attention particulière est consacrée aux conflits post-guerre froide ainsi qu'à la transformation des relations entre l'Union européenne et les grandes puissances. Au niveau mondial, d'intenses bouleversements ont radicalement modifié les grilles de lecture des crises et des conflits, qu'il s'agisse de la prévention, de la gestion ou de la résolution de ceux-ci.

This series welcomes contributions seeking to analyse the geopolitical changes which have been such a prominent feature of the European and world arena since 1989. At the European level, there is a particular focus on post-Cold War conflicts along with the transformation which has occurred in relations between the European Union and major powers. At a world level, major upheavals have radically altered the ground rules for understanding conflicts and crises. They have also had far-reaching implications for the prevention, management and resolution of disputes.

Interdisciplinary Studies on Central and Eastern Europe

Edited by Nicolas Hayoz, Jens Herlth and Julia Richers

This series focuses on the political, economic and cultural changes in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union. It offers a platform for inter-disciplinary research on this multifaceted part of the world. The focus lies mainly on current and recent developments in societies and political systems; but research on cultural and historical backgrounds has its place here, too. The range of disciplines includes political science, history, and social anthropology, but also philosophy, cultural studies, and literary criticism. The articles are written in English.

La Fabrique du politique

Sociologie de l'action publique

Édité par Cécile Robert

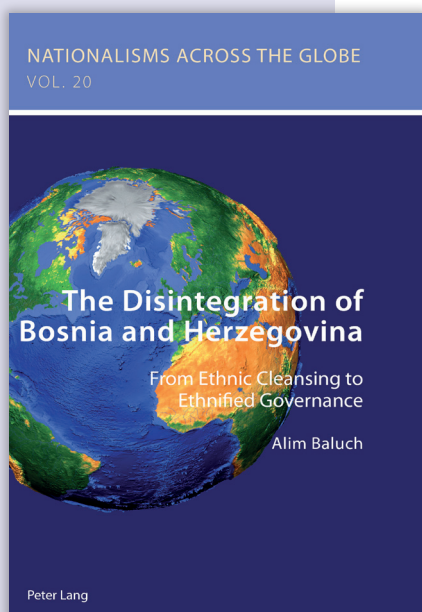

L'analyse des politiques publiques, des institutions et acteurs qui les conçoivent, a beaucoup gagné à s'ouvrir largement aux autres sciences sociales et particulièrement à la sociologie. Qu'il s'agisse des organisations internationales, des institutions européennes, des administrations nationales ou encore des collectivités territoriales, les enquêtes quantitatives et qualitatives sur leur personnel et leurs interlocuteurs privilégiés, l'observation ethnographique, le travail sur archives, permettent de renouveler le regard sur l'action publique. Attentives à la diversité des acteurs engagés dans la formulation des politiques publiques, ces recherches peuvent en outre s'appuyer avec profit sur les enseignements et concepts de la sociologie du droit, des organisations, des professions, ou des institutions pour éclairer la façon dont élus, fonctionnaires, experts, représentants d'intérêts, ou encore usagers y contribuent.

Nationalisms across the Globe

Edited by Tomasz Kamusella and Krzysztof Jaskułowski

Although in the 1980s the widely shared belief was that nationalism had become a spent force, the fragmentation of the studiously non-national Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia in the 1990s into a multitude of successor nation-states reaffirmed its continuing significance. Today all extant polities (with the exception of the Vatican) are construed as nation states, and hence nationalism is the sole universally accepted criterion of statehood legitimization. Similarly, human groups wishing to be recognized as fully fledged participants in international relations must define themselves as nations. This concept of world politics underscores the need for open ended, broad-ranging, novel, and interdisciplinary research into nationalism and ethnicity. It promotes better understanding of the phenomena relating to social, political, and economic life, both past and present.

Political and Social Change

Edited by Óscar García Agustín and Martin Bak Jørgensen

Political and Social Change is a multidisciplinary series dedicated to the analysis and understanding of changes in modern society. It includes topics such as democratic transformations, cultural dynamics, genealogies of change, collective identities, articulation of alternative discourses, and the role of civil society in processes of change. It covers both historical readings and contemporary studies. It directs attention toward multi-scalar changes in the global world where local, national and transnational practices are intertwined. The series welcomes innovative theoretical approaches in the field of social and political change as well as applied studies that offer new insight about the mentioned topics. It is open to edited volumes and monographs and welcomes comparative studies and transnational perspectives.

Regional Integration and Social Cohesion

Édité par Harlan Koff

Regional Integration and Social Cohesion (RISC) is an interdisciplinary and multilingual (English, French, German, Spanish, Italian and Portuguese) series that examines the human and environmental impacts of regional integration, defined legally/politically (supranationalism), economically (globalization), socially (identity), and geographically (borders). The series aims to link global analysis of issues associated with social cohesion, such as market shifts, immigration, environmental risk and the deterioration of natural resources, human rights, violence and security, etc., with national and subnational studies that focus on political decision-making, the non-governmental sector and social participation in public debates, economic transformations, social marginalization, identity, etc. Thus, the series aims to combine the international, national and subnational arenas of politics in thematically-oriented research. While proposed case studies are welcome, the works presented in this series from all social science disciplines, are predominantly based on the comparative method. Studies that compare across geographic regions, defined continentally, are of particular interest.

Studies in Communication and Politics

Edited by Bogusława Dobek-Ostrowska and Michał Głowacki

In Studies in Communication and Politics the editors are particularly interested in changing approaches to democracy, communication, political participation and media. By publishing collaborative works and monographs they aim at supporting and promoting interdisciplinary research, offering comparative approach and/or examining national factors for communication and politics development. Hence, the emphasis here is being put on the changing approaches to democracy and its institutions, political actors, electoral campaigns, as well as citizens' participation in political processes, electoral behavior, and so on. Having in mind the changing media landscape and the rise of media ecologies we also aim at investigating emerging communication and media policies, evolution of journalism culture, changing patterns of users' behavior and media innovations in the digital and multiplatform scenario. All of this when taking into account interrelations between communication and as well as the role of media in contemporary politics.

Studies in European Integration, State and Society

Edited by Magdalena Góra, Zdzisław Mach and Katarzyna Zielińska

European integration is a profound phenomenon influencing our current understanding of political and social processes in Europe and beyond. The set of European institutions that have now functioned in the continent for over half a century have created new broadened frames of reference for a variety of social actors. The most comprehensive is the European Union, which can be characterised as a multilevel polity. The other organisations, such as the Council of Europe and OSCE, also contribute significantly to the new mode of relations in Europe. This has in turn influenced how social and political actors act and define their roles. European integration has changed the functioning of states, their sovereignty and the meaning and status of borders, as well as the nature of citizenship. It has also allowed social actors to be engaged in the increasingly transnationalised public sphere and therefore changed the analysis of the concept of civil society. In addition, it profoundly impacts the life of individuals, permitting spatial and social mobility along with reconstruction of collective identity and memory. This series welcomes book proposals that look at the political and social aspects of human activities in the broadest terms but analysed from the perspective of how these processes are transformed as a result of European integration.

Travail et Société / Work and Society

Édité par/Edited by Philippe Pochet

La collection Travail & Société analyse les évolutions de la sphère du travail et des politiques sociales à travers l'étude des stratégies menées par les acteurs sociaux, tant sur le plan national qu'eupéen. Elle propose une approche pluridisciplinaire – politique, sociologique, économique, juridique et historique – dans un souci de dialogue et de complémentarité.

La collection ne se limite pas à des études du champ social stricto sensu mais vise également à illustrer les impacts sociaux indirects des politiques économiques et monétaires. Elle s'attache à mettre en perspective les évolutions sociales, tant du point de vue historique que de manière comparative, en illustrant la convergence et la divergence dans les différents parcours nationaux. La dimension européenne, et plus particulièrement l'impact de l'intégration européenne, constitue un axe d'analyse privilégié.

The series Work & Society analyses the development of employment and social policies, as well as the strategies of the different social actors, both at national and European levels. It puts forward a multi-disciplinary approach – political, sociological, economic, legal and historical – in a bid for dialogue and complementarity.

The series is not confined to the social field stricto sensu, but also aims to illustrate the indirect social impacts of economic and monetary policies. It endeavours to clarify social developments, from a comparative and a historical perspective, thus portraying the process of convergence and divergence in the diverse national societal contexts. The manner in which European integration impacts on employment and social policies constitutes the backbone of the analyses.

Violence Studies

Edited by Felix Ó Murchadha

This series aims to publish work which explores violence in the diverse areas of human life from the bedroom to the battlefield and in its different modes of appearance from language to social and economic structures to the infliction of physical harm. This series is particularly, though not exclusively, directed towards scholars in the areas of philosophy, literature, sociology and cultural studies. It seeks to encompass a wide range of theoretical approaches and disciplinary orientations investigating the phenomena of violence and how they are expressed and codified in literature, cultural and political practice, and in the forms of human society. It welcomes also works which explore the ways in which violence is inflicted on the non-human world of animals and the environment. We are especially interested in books exploring the intersections of violence and religion, violence in language and rhetoric, as well as studies on the issues of gender, power and ideology as they relate to questions of violence. This series welcomes both individually authored and collaboratively authored books and monographs as well as edited collections of essays and conference proceedings.
