

Contents

Acknowledgements .....	9
Introduction .....	11
Part I: The micro-macro problem in sociology: theoretical background .....	19
1 Classical approaches to the micro-macro problem in sociology.....	19
1.1 Introduction .....	19
1.2 Micro-macro and other pairings in sociological theory .....	20
1.3 The classics on micro-macro and macro-micro .....	27
1.4 The 1980s and the debate about the micro-macro link .....	34
1.5 Linking micro and macro via meso .....	47
1.6 Concluding remarks.....	51
2 Social fields: the meso-level of analysis.....	54
2.1 Introduction .....	54
2.2 Social fields and the sociology of Pierre Bourdieu.....	55
2.3 Sociology of organizations in the search for the level of analysis .....	61
2.4 Towards an integration of the field theories: strategic action fields approach.....	67
2.5 Concluding remarks.....	71
3 Social networks: tying micro and macro .....	72
3.1 Introduction .....	72
3.2 From fishermen to World Wide Web: a brief review of network approaches in social sciences .....	74
3.3 How nodes are tied into society: from micro to macro.....	87
3.4 Concluding remarks.....	95

Part II: The sociological vacuum: the story of the spell cast on Polish sociologists .....	97
4 Polish sociology in the 1970s, Stefan Nowak, and the sociological vacuum thesis .....	97
4.1 Introduction .....	97
4.2 Stefan Nowak.....	97
4.3 Survey sociology: measurement of attitudes, values, and society as an aggregate of individuals.....	99
4.4 Thesis on Poland's sociological vacuum .....	102
4.5 The sociological vacuum: brilliant intuition or a methodological artifact? .....	103
4.6 Concluding remarks.....	108
5 Solidarność: how atomized individuals mobilized as a social movement?.....	109
5.1 Introduction .....	109
5.2 The outburst of Solidarność: the most interesting event in Polish social history .....	110
5.3 A movement fulfilling the vacuum? Solidarność as a problem for sociology of Polish society.....	113
5.4 Towards sociological explanations of Solidarność: how are atoms linked into a society?.....	119
5.5 Concluding remarks.....	126
6 Civil society: in search of the new actor of the social transformation .....	128
6.1 Introduction .....	128
6.2 Civil society: its rivals and kin .....	130
6.3 Civil society in the vacuum .....	133
6.4 For the common good? Associationalism: its advantages and disadvantages.....	140
6.5 In search of civic life in Poland .....	145
6.6 Concluding remarks.....	152
7 Social capital: what mediates between individuals and society?.....	154
7.1 Introduction .....	154
7.2 Social capital: short story of a fuzzy concept .....	155

7.3	Social capital and the sociological vacuum .....	166
7.4	What do we know about the social capital in Poland? .....	172
7.5	Concluding remarks .....	176
8	Quality of democracy: social base for political institutions .....	178
8.1	Introduction .....	178
8.2	Democracy: aggregating individual wills into collective action.....	179
8.3	Democracy in the vacuum?.....	193
8.4	Concluding remarks .....	202
Part III: What fills up the sociological vacuum?
Empirical illustration .....		205
9	Getting a job in Poland: how weak ties fill up the sociological vacuum? .....	205
9.1	Introduction .....	205
9.2	Brief story of getting a job studies .....	206
9.3	Getting a job in Poland .....	209
9.4	Concluding remarks .....	220
Conclusions .....		223
References .....		237
Index .....		265

