

Contents

Introduction	13
Beginnings: Questions, Inspirations, Objectives	13
Theories: Memory, Politics and Forgetting	19
In the Field: Methods and Methodology	27
1 Dramatis personae: History and Memory	37
Roots (up to 1939)	37
War and Other Misfortunes (1938–1945)	43
Brave New World (1945–1953)	48
The Post-war Culture of (Non-)Remembrance (1953–1989/1991)	56
After the Fall of Communism: New Beginnings? (1989/1991-present)	66
2 Resettlement and the First Phase of Adaptation	79
The Journey: Autobiographical Memory and its Transmission	79
Fear, Violence, Poverty: After Arrival	90
Yearning, Temporariness, Alienation	100
3 The Creation of a New Community and Social Integration	113
Relations with the Authorities and the New Political System	113
To Build Everything Anew, or the Social Wild West	125
The Long-term Consequences of Post-war Divisions: Integration Processes Among the Younger Generations	133
4 Resettlement and Identity	147
Returning Home – the Last Stage of the Psychological Integration Process	147

People Make a Place a Home: “Who would I return to?”	148
The Former Homeland as an Element of Identity: “It’s good that we know these things.”	149
The Lost Homeland and Crippled Identity: “A person is always attached to their homeland.”	151
No Need for Homeland: “Why would we go there?”	153
The Old Homeland in the Consciousness of the Younger Generations	154
Gains and Losses – Who Came Through Migration Successfully?	157
5 Remembering the Absent: Germans and German Heritage in Krzyż	163
Settlers vs. Germans: Memories of the Oldest Generation	163
Before our Grandparents: Memory Among the Younger Generations	172
The Germans Today: Castaways, Tourists, Litigants?	176
Around Material Heritage	187
German Heritage and Identity	194
6 Remembering the Absent: Jews and Jewish Heritage in Zhovkva	201
Life and Death Among Neighbors	201
Hearsay: What do the Resettlers Know about Zhovkva’s Jews?	209
Family (Non-)Memory: The Next Generations	214
Foreign Heritage	222
Survivors, Ghosts, Visitors	230
7 Remembering the Absent: Poles and Polish Heritage in Zhovkva	237
Once upon a Time in Poland	237
Times of Threat	243
Emigration, Expulsion, Marginalization	251

“Now it is OK”	256
Material and Symbolic Heritage	261
8 Between Heroes and Traitors: The UPA and the Soviets in Zhovkva	271
Bandits or Heroes? Troubled Autobiographical Memories	271
Pride and Prejudice: Ukrainian Nationalists in Collective Memory	275
“Liberators” and Liberators – or Two Types of Soviets	285
Stalinism, Stabilization, Veterans: Memories of Soviet Zhovkva	291
Heroes and Traitors: Summary	297
9 A Land Without Heroes: Problems of the Memory Canon in Krzyż	301
Good Russians and Bad Russians: Autobiographical Memory	301
The Soviets in the Memories of the Younger Generations	308
Krzyż and Zhovkva: A Comparison of Heroic Canons	311
Postscriptum: Symbolic Space	315
Conclusions	325
Memories of Resettlement	326
Memories of Absent Others	327
Memories of Heroes	329
Between Memory and Forgetting	330
Memories of the Past and Collective Identity	332
Biographical Index of Respondents	337
Zhovkva	337
Krzyż	344

Bibliography	353
Index	373