

Contents

Foreword	7
Patrick Zabalbeascoa “That’s just what we need, a fourth language”. Multilingual humour in film and television translation	15
Laura Langer Rossi The translated text. The aesthetic impact of language on transnational cinema	35
Christoph Fasbender Multilingualism in the Middle Ages Movie	57
Fabian Hauner The Sophisticated, the Comic and the Nazi: Images of the German and German Language in Three Movies about Occupied France	75
Marie-Christine Scholz The limits of authenticity. On the flawless French of Germans in Merry Christmas and Un village français	93
Thea Kruse Migration, Multilingualism and European Heritage: The Biopics Django (2017) and Vor der Morgenröte (2016)	109
Ralf Junkerjürgen Multilingual Europe. Discourses of Identity in the Erasmus Movies L’Auberge espagnole and Júlia ist	137
Ralf Junkerjürgen & Katharina Schryro “My identity is like a patchwork of different experiences.” A conversation with the multilingual actress Laura Weissmahr	153
Gala Rebane ‘There is no word for thank you in Dothraki’: Language ideologies in Game of Thrones	169

Cristina Alonso-Villa
John Wick and the multilingual kick	197
Gemma King
Denis Villeneuve's multilingual cinema: Decentring space, time and language in Arrival	209
Christian Koch
Reflecting social bilingualism in film. On Kichwa fragments in Ecuadorian cinema	225
List of contributors	241