

Peter Lang Simplifies Negotiation of Republication Rights

Bern, November 21, 2017

The Peter Lang publishing group announces its participation in the Copyright Clearance Center's (CCC) Republication Service – the most comprehensive source for clearing broad republication permissions. By using this service, rights acquisition professionals can quickly secure print and digital permissions from hundreds of participating rights holders in a single transaction. Publishers benefit from a new channel to offer republication permissions and a simplified process for negotiating those rights.

The Peter Lang group will enlist all its titles in the service that were published in 2002 and going forward. Publishers, universities and others interested in securing permissions to republish this content in new works can access the Republication Service at www.copyright.com. The platform then allows them to easily search for individual publications, quickly check available rights, review the terms and conditions, and select and pay for the rights they need.

«Peter Lang publishes around 1,700 new titles per year and receives numerous requests to reuse its content in other works», says Kelly Shergill, CEO of Peter Lang. «In the best interest of our authors we want to grant as many of these permissions as possible while observing copyright compliance and we welcome the service that makes the process fast, easy and efficient.»

«We are pleased to expand our relationship with Peter Lang to include CCC's Republication License», says Darren Gillgrass, Director, Rightsholder Products and Services at Copyright Clearance Center. «This partnership not only enriches CCC's content repository, but aligns with our mission to generate new revenue opportunities for rights holders such as Peter Lang and their authors.»
